TEACHERS OF AGRICULTURE

A SIGNIFICANT LINE OF WORK TO BE UNDERTAKEN AT THE CENTRAL STATE NORMAL.

Course Which is Being Prepared To Go Into Effect July 1, 1913.

The Board of Education at a meeting held at Mt. Pleasant, May 27, 1912 designated the Central State Normal as the training school for the preparation of teachers of agriculture in the public schools of the State. This work will be undertaken as a special department of the school and will in no sense interfere with or curtail the work the institution has been doing since its organization in the way of training teachers nor the various grades of public school service. Studies that will count toward the completion of the new course of study are in progress at the present time so that pupils desiring to take the course may begin their course this year, but the course as a whole, which is being prepared by a special committee of the Normal school council, will be published in the forthcoming year book of the school for July 1, 1913.

There is no subject at the present time of more vital interest to the State and the nation than the scientific study of agriculture; and there is no problem crying louder for solution than the problem of interesting the boys and girls of the country in rural life to such an extent that they will be satisfied to remain on the farm and make agriculture their life's work. During the impressionable period of school life is the time to arouse and fix a child's interest in this direction. To this end the State must send into the rural and village school a body of teachers trained in agricultural and allied sciences, who because of their training and their sympathy with all phases of rural life will lead the children to appreciate the advantages of life in the country, with its freedom, its independence, its ever shifting panorama of beauty, over the congested life of the city with all its uncertainties, its poverty, unwholesome atmosphere of store, of shop, of office, and its sharp and often unfair competition.

Already between twenty and thirty high schools in the State have adopted and are teaching courses in agriculture. The State Manual and Course of Study issued by the Department of Public Instruction included agriculture as one of the subjects that must be taught in all rural schools of the State. At the present time the demand for special teachers of agriculture is greater than the supply; and with growing interest in the subject, not only in Michigan, but in every State in the Union, it isn't difficult to see that the demand for trained teachers will increase very rapidly during the next few years.

The State Agricultural college at Lansing through its department of agricultural education is doing excellent work, and is preparing a small number of expert teachers of agriculture, but its product is quickly absorbed by the normal schools, other agricultural colleges and the high schools of larger cities of the country. This leaves a large, unoccupied field for the Central State Normal School. Through its special department it will strive to meet the demand for trained teachers of agriculture and allied sciences in the high schools of our smaller cities and villages, as well as to send into the rural schools of the State a body of teachers filled with a desire to stimulate in their pupils a sense of rural life and progress. It will thus be seen that two State schools will be rivals in the field of agricultural education. Each will have its distinctive field and the two will work together in the spirit of friendly co-operation.

The State Legislature at the coming session will be asked for a special appropriation to enable the school to organize this new line of work on a scientific basis. Two things will be needed: first an agricultural and general science building with suitable lecture rooms, laboratories, etc., and, second, a demonstration farm for observation and experimental purposes. The vital importance of the work the State Board of Education has delegated to the Central school makes it seem that there can be no hesitation on the part of the legislature in voting an appropriation sufficiently large to enable the institution to organize this department on such a basis that its influence will be at once felt in quickening the agricultural interests of the State.

There is no more promising field for young men who are looking forward to teaching as a career than along the line of agriculture. Those who have had special training along this line of work will be sure of a good position at good salaries. Teachers' agencies throughout the country are literally unable to meet the demand for trained teachers of agriculture. One open door through which young men may enter upon this desirable and profitable line of work will be the special course in agricultural education to be offered at the State Central Normal.

While the next congress will be Democratic in both branches, the senate majority margin will be very small. If the Republicans stand together on important issues they will constitute a very powerful minority.

It diverges from the Democratic majority in respect to tariff schedules of any other important party measure there may be a series of deadlocks that will prevent action.

And then there is Dr. Woodrow Wilson. Will there be complete harmony of view in respect to a tariff redraft between the new congress and the new president? Nobody knows at this time.

The thing that looms largest in many Democratic minds in connection with the accession to power in national affairs of the Democratic party is the distribution of the patronage. If the civil service law is not eluded, and there is no reason to expect that the next president will permit it to be sidetracked the place changes will not be so sweeping as they were under the first Cleveland administration.

But the appointments which the new president will make will run far up in the thousands and will affect every state and congressional district. In the view of many Democrats the most important of all Democratic maxims is that Jacksonian axiom: "To the victors belong the spoils." It is fateful to certain that there will be a great army of place hunters from all over the map to invade Washington as soon as the new president takes up quarters at the White House.

Speaking of the prospective and inevitable office-hunting army that will besiege the new president, Col. Henry Waterson of the Louisville Courier-Journal, declares that upon the very threshold of his administration the new president will have rough work to do, Colonel Waterson predicts that "the onrush of office hunters will surpass anything ever known before."

Concerning the appointment of a president, the Louisville Journal editor declares that they will echo through the White House and assail the new occupant "during all his waking hours and pursue him in his sleep and dreams, morning, noon and night. He will never escape from the mean, sordid and brazen in the rank ignominy of self-seeking."

Colonel Waterson's picture of what awaits Dr. Wilson as a patronage distributor is not too fancifully touched up. Far more serious difficulties, however, than standing off and sending back the office-hunting brigades will soon be encountered if the new president happens to have some ideals as to legislative policy that differ from those which the congressional majority may attempt to put through. In the Democratic platform adopted at the Baltimore convention not one word is said about maintaining the protective principle in the advocated tariff of the tariff.

In the platform the protection is placed upon the declaration of the schedules. It was in reference to this plank that Governor Wilson time and again in his campaign speeches remarked that "a platform is not a program." Frequently he told his audiences in manufacturing sections: "I do not believe in free trade or anything like it." By "anything like it" he must have meant, undoubtedly, the tariff.

Prosperity of Republican Rule. The 1907 panic was a Wall street affair—that is to say, it was a spectacular panic. It touched the country only in spots, and the farm industries were prostrated during 1893, 1894, 1895, and until late in 1907. We have had no such period of prostration since the restoration of the Republican party to power in 1897—15 years ago—as the four-year period during which the country was run under a Democratic tariff.

Keeping Up Standard of Living. If we had not enjoyed the benefit of a protective tariff for many years there would now be no American standard of living; it would be the European standard of living, or the still lower English standard, where the working people subsist on a plain, monotonous diet. The English trade report states that there is a greater variety of meat diet in France than in England, and that considered as a whole the diet of the French is more varied and of greater quantity than the English. And this despite the increased cost of living in France, which in the years between 1905 and 1907 food prices increased considerably. For there was a rise of from 7 to 23 per cent, on pork, beef from 7 to 9 per cent, mutton from 2 to 10 per cent, 5 per cent on coffee, sugar from 9 to 20 per cent, yeast from 10 to 16 per cent, bread from 4 to 16 per cent. Yet wages have not gone up.

All the capital jokes do not originate in Washington.

Speaking of the prospective and inevitable office-hunting army that will besiege the new president, Col. Henry Waterson of the Louisville Courier-Journal, declares that upon the very threshold of his administration the new president will have rough work to do, Colonel Waterson predicts that "the onrush of office hunters will surpass anything ever known before."

Concerning the appointment of a president, the Louisville Journal editor declares that they will echo through the White House and assail the new occupant "during all his waking hours and pursue him in his sleep and dreams, morning, noon and night. He will never escape from the mean, sordid and brazen in the rank ignominy of self-seeking."

Colonel Waterson's picture of what awaits Dr. Wilson as a patronage distributor is not too fancifully touched up. Far more serious difficulties, however, than standing off and sending back the office-hunting brigades will soon be encountered if the new president happens to have some ideals as to legislative policy that differ from those which the congressional majority may attempt to put through. In the Democratic platform adopted at the Baltimore convention not one word is said about maintaining the protective principle in the advocated tariff of the tariff.

In the platform the protection is placed upon the declaration of the schedules. It was in reference to this plank that Governor Wilson time and again in his campaign speeches remarked that "a platform is not a program." Frequently he told his audiences in manufacturing sections: "I do not believe in free trade or anything like it." By "anything like it" he must have meant, undoubtedly, the tariff.

Prosperity of Republican Rule. The 1907 panic was a Wall street affair—that is to say, it was a spectacular panic. It touched the country only in spots, and the farm industries were prostrated during 1893, 1894, 1895, and until late in 1907. We have had no such period of prostration since the restoration of the Republican party to power in 1897—15 years ago—as the four-year period during which the country was run under a Democratic tariff.

Keeping Up Standard of Living. If we had not enjoyed the benefit of a protective tariff for many years there would now be no American standard of living; it would be the European standard of living, or the still lower English standard, where the working people subsist on a plain, monotonous diet. The English trade report states that there is a greater variety of meat diet in France than in England, and that considered as a whole the diet of the French is more varied and of greater quantity than the English. And this despite the increased cost of living in France, which in the years between 1905 and 1907 food prices increased considerably. For there was a rise of from 7 to 23 per cent, on pork, beef from 7 to 9 per cent, mutton from 2 to 10 per cent, 5 per cent on coffee, sugar from 9 to 20 per cent, yeast from 10 to 16 per cent, bread from 4 to 16 per cent. Yet wages have not gone up.

All the capital jokes do not originate in Washington.

NOT A MAJORITY PRESIDENT

Woodrow Wilson's Elevation to High Office Largely Matter of Lucky Circumstances.

Imposing as Governor Wilson's majority in the electoral college looms up before the country, the entire structure of Democratic power in the nation will be founded from the first on quicksand. Woodrow Wilson is to be a minority president to a degree unprecedented in American history.

His triumph at the polls is obviously due to his success in numerous states where he fell far short of obtaining half the ballots cast.

In 1860 Abraham Lincoln was a minority victor in the presidential race, but in a totally different sense. Breckinridge, who carried many states in the south, made no show in the northern states where Lincoln beat Douglas. The states which Lincoln carried he swept, as a rule, by a clear majority of all the votes cast.

With Woodrow Wilson the situation is radically different. He has carried state after state in which the Roosevelt vote combined with the Taft vote would have buried the Democratic ticket out of sight.

These facts make it clear that from the beginning of President-elect Wilson's term he and his party will stand on a most treacherous footing. At any time that the Progressives and the Republicans, long members of the same great organization, get together, even in a degree falling considerably short of the old unity, down will come the Democratic house of cards and the term of the minority president will be doomed to end in his complete overthrow as an aspirant for further political honors.

Republican Party's Future. As for those to whom the unity and power of the Republican party is dear there must be a new course set. At present it is in exactly the same position as the Democratic party after 1896, except that the rupture is more violent and the fracture more even. Unless it is to undergo a long period of minority it must acquire the ideas that have brought it to this pass. It must cease to be swayed by devotion to personal ambitions or by service to pecuniary interests. The discarding of personal interests and the sincere advocacy only of popular welfare must restore the Republican party to its old place. Nothing short of this is likely to—unless the Democrats make good their former record of throwing away by monumental blunders what they have gained.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

NEW KIND OF AN IRISHMAN

Definition That by His Own Confession Was Very Little Far From the Truth.

Apologies of the very telling retorts that Sam Schepps made to Cross-Eyed McIntyre in the Becker case, Jerome S. McWade, the Duluth connoisseur, said:

"I like to see anyone get back at an impudent lawyer. I got back at such a lawyer myself the other day."

"The man was my counsel in a customs dispute over some Gobiell tapes that I'd imported. His name had, like my own, a 'Mc' in it, and I said to him, as I settled his very large bill:

"Are you an Irishman, sir?"

"No," he answered, with a pompous laugh, "but I've made a lot of money out of Irishmen in my time."

"Oh, I see," said I. "I suppose we might call you an Irishman by extraction, then."

HANDS BURNING, ITCHING

905 Lowell Place, Chicago, Ill.—"The trouble began by my hands burning and itching and I rubbed and scratched them till one day I saw little red sores coming out. My hands were disfigured and swollen, and troubled me so that I could not sleep. They were cracked and when the small sores broke a white matter would come out. I could not do any hard work; if I did the sores would come out worse. For two years no body could cure my eczema, until one day I thought I would try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used warm water with the Cuticura Soap and after that I put the Cuticura Ointment on my hands twice a day for about five or six months when I was cured. (Signed) Sam Marcus, Nov. 28, 1911. Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free with 22-p. Skin-Book. Address post-card 'Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston.' Adv.

GOOD DESCRIPTION.

Teacher: "Willie, what is a volcano?" Willie: "Why-er, it's like a furnace full of Roman candles wid de door open."

Frontier Medical List.

In good old frontier days eastern oil was the principal medical beverage—good full measure, too. Only the biggest person could hold a whole dose—one-half a dipperful, with half a dipperful of New Orleans molasses added to help slick it down and make it taste good; only it didn't taste good. In those historic days every old woman was a doctor and gathered her own 'yarbs' in the woods and knew how to mix up medical messes that would stir the vital of a brass monkey or a cast iron dog. All backwoodsmen believed in 'yarb' doctors. Something in 'yarbs' at that.

Smelled a Graft.

A Boston clubman recently returned from a visit to New York city. In discussing his trip one of his friends asked him whether he had a police man in his pocket. The clubman hesitated for a moment, seriously questioning his friend's sanity, when the latter added:

"I didn't know whether you could be there a week without some graft or other getting into your pocket."

Omivious.

"I like affectionate animals. Does this dog attach himself to people easily?"

"Not if they can run faster than he can."

Chance.

"I always embrace an opportunity."

"But, then, you must be careful you are not hugging a delusion."

SYNOPSIS.

Stubborn as the lock was, perseverance overcame it. George then, as a slight diversion, spread the ancient Yorlodes over the trunk and stared at it in pleasurable contemplation. What a beauty it was! What exquisite blue, what soft red, what minute patterns! And this treasure was his. He leaned down upon it with his two hands. A color stole into his cheeks. It had its source in an old confusion; school boys jeering a mate seen walking home from school with a girl. It was all rot, he perfectly knew, this wishful business, and yet he hung into the sun-warmed, sun-kissed space an ardent wish, sent it speeding round the world from east to west. Fast as heat, fast as light it traveled, for no sooner had it sprung from his mind than it entered the window of a room across the corridor. Whether the window was open or shut was of no importance. Whether such wishes penetrated and went through all articles. And this one touched Fortune's eyes, her lips, her lips; it caressed her in a thousand happy ways. But, alas! such wishes are without temporal power.

Fortune never knew. She sat in a chair, her fingers locked tensely, her eyes large and set in gaze, her lips compressed, her whole attitude one of impatient despair.

George did not see her at lunch, and Fortune had immediately returned from the bazaar. And a kind of torpor blanketed her mind, usually so fertile and active. For a time the process of the evolution of thought was denied her; she tried to think, but there was an appalling lack of continuity, of broken threads. It was like one of those circumferential railways; she traveled but did not get anywhere.

Ryanne had told her too much for his own sake, but too little for hers. She sat back in the carriage, inert and listless, and indeliberately likened her condition to driftwood in the ebb and flow of beach-waves. The color and composition of the streets were no longer absorbed; it was as if she were riding through emptiness, through the unreality of a dream. She was oppressed and stifled, too; harrowing of storms.

Mechanically she dismissed the carriage at the hotel, mechanically she went to her room, and in this semi-conscious mood sat down in a chair, and there George's visit found her, futtily. Oh, there was one thing clear, clear as the sky outside. All was not right; something was wrong; and this wrong upon one side concerned her mother, her sister, and Ryanne, and upon the other side, Mr. Jones. "Think and think as the night," her endeavor gave her no single illumination. Four blind walls surrounded her. The United Romance and Adventure company—there could not possibly be such a thing in existence; it was a jest of Ryanne's to cover up something far more serious.

She pressed her eyes with a hand. They ached dully; the dull pain of bewilderment, which these days returned with frequency. A sense of time

Epilogue.

It was time to go up and dress for dinner. Tonight (as if the gods had turned George's future affairs over to the care of Momus) he dressed as if he were going to the opera; swallow-tail, white vest, high collar and white-lawn cravat opera-belt, and thin-soled pumps; all in as habilliments and demiballabillments supposed to make the man. When he reached what he thought to be the glass of fashion and the mold of form, he turned for the first time toward his trunk. He did not rub his eyes; he wasn't at all necessary; the thing he saw, or rather did not see, was established beyond a doubt, as plainly definite as two and two are four. The ancient Yorlodes had taken upon itself one of the potentialities of its fabulous prototype, that of invisibility; it was gone.

Tonight (as if the gods had turned George's future affairs over to the care of Momus) he dressed as if he were going to the opera; swallow-tail, white vest, high collar and white-lawn cravat opera-belt, and thin-soled pumps; all in as habilliments and demiballabillments supposed to make the man. When he reached what he thought to be the glass of fashion and the mold of form, he turned for the first time toward his trunk. He did not rub his eyes; he wasn't at all necessary; the thing he saw, or rather did not see, was established beyond a doubt, as plainly definite as two and two are four. The ancient Yorlodes had taken upon itself one of the potentialities of its fabulous prototype, that of invisibility; it was gone.

Prosperity Came in Jumps

Good Story From Which Private John Allen Drew a Rule to Guide His Conduct.

Private John Allen, during his long service as representative of Mississippi in congress, was importuned on one occasion to make an after-dinner speech at a banquet at which he was to be a guest.

"Not," said the "private," "I will make a before-dinner speech but none after dinner."

When reminded that a before-dinner speech was quite out of the ordinary, and was asked for his reason for desiring to make his speech before dinner, he told the following story:

"There was a 'no-mo-dwell' that lived near Tupelo, my home town, some years ago, named Bill Jones. Bill had a brother Bob, who had gone to Texas quite a while before, and reports said that he was enjoying a fair share of worldly prosperity.

When a Texan, from the town in which Bob had located, came to Tupelo, he looked up Bob, who said to him:

"Tell Bob that I have a large family, and things are against me somewhat, and if he can give me a little assistance it will be greatly appreciated."

He continued on this strain for some time so that the Texan to relieve the situation proposed that he have a drink. The drink was disposed of, and Bill was cheered up considerably, began to tell what a good crop he would have this year, etc.

Isaac Goodale killed a deer on Monday of this week.

Thos. McElroy was a Grayling caller on Friday last.

Miss Jeanette DePeal has returned from her trip to Omer.

Chas. Kuehl returned to his home in Saginaw on Friday, the owner of a fine deer.

Mrs. Sohn left Tuesday for the hospital at Grayling where she will undergo an operation.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Morrow entertained the former, a sister of Johannesburg during the past week.

T. R. Donovan and wife, of Detroit, who have enjoyed a vacation at their cottage on the main stream returned to their home on Tuesday last.

Mrs. E. S. Houghton and children left on Tuesday of this week for an extended visit with relatives and friends at West Branch and other cities. Mr. H. accompanied them to Grayling.

Dr. Sullivan, Fred Hammond, Seaman, Joe and Fred Gable, all of Clarkston, who have been enjoying the hunting season about 10 miles the river, returned home on Thursday with five deer.

The shadow social held at the pavilion on Thursday evening for the benefit of the Xmas tree at the school was a success, the proceeds amounting to $19.50. Dancing was indulged in by old and young and all spent a most enjoyable evening.

Miss Bessie Slingerland was very pleasantly surprised by twenty one of her little friends on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 23, it being her 9th birthday. Games and music furnished entertainment after which a delicious lunch was served, a beautiful birthday cake gracing the table. She was the happy recipient of numerous gifts, among which was a silver thimble. A jolly time is the general report.

Twelve years ago a family named McKinley sailed out of Grayling in a "prairie schooner" looking for a better place to live. Last week they passed through here, coming from the south and bound for Cheboygan county. In conversation with a friend Mr. McKinley said: "If I had staid here and took the land as you and the others advised I would have had a good home now, as it is I have traveled around for those twelve years, and am not worth twelve dollars more than when I left here."

He Belonged. The accomplished and obliging pianist had rendered several selections, when one of the admiring group of listeners in the hotel parlor suggested Mozart's Twelfth Mass. Several people echoed the request, but one lady was particularly desirous of hearing the piece, explaining that her husband had belonged to that very regiment. Everybody's Magazine.

Flagged Train With Shirt.

Tearing his shirt from his back an Ohio man flagged a train and saved it from a wreck, but T. A. Ralston, Raleigh, N. C., once prevented a wreck with Electric Bitters. "I was in a terrible plight when I began to use them. My stomach, head, back and kidneys were all badly affected and my liver was in bad condition, but four bottles of Electric Bitters made me feel like a new man. A trial bottle will convince you of their matchless merit for any stomach trouble." Price 50 cents at A. M. Lewis & Co. Adv.

The KITCHEN CABINET

MAKESON says: "I know no such questionable badge and emblem of a sovereign mind, as that tenacity of purpose which, through all changes of companions or parties or fortunes, changes no heart, no job, no heart or hope, but wears out opposition and arrives at its port."

DAINTIES FOR CHILDREN'S PARTIES.

One of the things to guard against in serving children is that they must have a very rich food, or very little. Children are exceedingly fond of ice cream, and if not too rich or served in too large quantities, it is not harmful.

Sweet sandwiches, marguerites and fruits of all kinds make enough variety to please the small people, with no after ill effects.

Stewed prunes, mixed and chopped with nuts and used for a sandwich filling, are most appetizing. Cut them in different shapes, as often the appearance will decide the liking or not for the food. Cut in crescents, hearts, finger size or in circles; placed on a pretty plate, they will appeal to the taste of most any child.

Sponge cakes baked in gem pans and filled when cold with whipped cream which has been sweetened and flavored, are always a delight to young or old.

A delicious dessert for children, as well as a food of high value, are figs and raisins stewed together. The fruits should be served cold with brown bread and butter. If an extra rich and elegant dish is desired, add whipped cream.

A marshmallow dropped in the cup of cocoa takes the place of cream and is enjoyed by the little people.

Meringue cases may be made at home by piping whipped, white of egg and sugar into cup shapes and baking. Serve these filled with ice cream, garnished with candied cherries.

Another nice dessert is chopped marshmallows, a few nuts and sweetened whipped cream.

Lemon jelly, or any gelatine jelly, with marshmallows stirred in it and molded makes an attractive and effective pudding.

A half of a peach or pear, with whipped cream and a sprinkling of chopped nuts, with nut bread sandwiches, is a most satisfying dessert.

Hot Scotch scones split and spread with butter and orange marmalade are delicious sandwiches which take the place of cake.

"Mercy! My Poor Back!!"

Backache Means Dying Kidneys Read Below Of The Wonderful New Kidney Cure—Then Test It Free.

Every man and woman should know that backache is usually a well-defined symptom of advancing kidney disease which may end fatally unless treated in time; that rheumatism, Bright's disease, diabetes, dropsy and bladder trouble are caused from nothing more nor less than kidneys that do not filter the poison from the blood.

Thousands of nervous, discouraged, ailing women who have traced their troubles to sick kidneys, have found almost instant relief from Dr. Dorr's Kidney Pills. A tall drug store—and so on. If you would like to try them first, ask your druggist for a free sample. If he can't supply you send direct to Dr. Dorr Medicine Co., Eaton Rapids, Mich.

The Basketball season opened Saturday evening. The preliminaries were played by the High school girls team against the All City girls team, resulting in a score of 10 to 10 in favor of the H. S. The girls are doing good work not only in the games but also in the practice games, having defeated All City at the practice Thursday evening. The second contest was between the High school boys team and All City boys, in which the latter won by 43 to 28. The H. S. was ahead at the end of the first half but tired out during the second.

Fred Knim, night yardmaster for the M. C. R. R. here, was found dead by Mrs. John Everts at her home where he roomed, last Saturday morning. Mrs. Everts called him for work at about six o'clock and not getting any response to her call she tried to open the door but it seems as though something was against it, she forced an entrance and found his body lying on the floor, near the door. Mrs. Everts ran down stairs, called her husband and Dr. Insley, who soon arrived but said he had been dead about six hours. He leaves to survive him, two daughters, of Bay City, who came Sunday morning and took his remains to Bay City Monday noon. He was subject to attacks of apoplexy from which he was ailing all summer, but of late was feeling quite well. It is thought he died while having an attack of that disease.

A coaster, at Wolverine, last week loaded with young people, became unmanageable as they were about to turn a corner and dashed with frightful speed into the Wolverine State Savings bank building. The coaster was being guided by Miss Molly Johnson, formerly of this city, and being ahead was in great danger of being instantly killed by being dashed against the brick building. However she was saved by prompt action of others on the load who grabbed her and drew her back so that aside of being badly cut about the face and shattering up, she escaped. The others escaped with slight bruises, but nothing serious. Miss Johnson was brought to Grayling last Saturday and is at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Johnson. Miss Johnson has the sympathy of a host of friends who hope for her a speedy recovery from her painful wounds.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wingard celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage, Monday evening, Nov. 25th, at their home on Michigan Ave. They entertained 50 of their friends and relatives. When all the guests had assembled Mrs. Hufon played the wedding march and the happy bride and groom marched to the center of the arch, where three large silver bells were arranged for the occasion. Rev. V. J. Hufon performed the marriage ceremony. Mrs. Van Vleet, from Tecumseh entertained the guests with music. At 9:30 lunch was served. While the guests at the first table were being served, little Myria Van Vleet sang "They always pick on me." Mildred Corwin sang "Silver Threads Among the Gold," accompanied by Vera Biggs. The bride's dress was of silver gray silk to suit the occasion. They received many beautiful pieces of silver in remembrance of the occasion. The last table finished eating at 12:30, and they congratulated the bride and groom, and left for their homes at an "early" hour, wishing the happy couple many more years of married life.

The Ladies of the G. A. R. will hold a special meeting Saturday afternoon in their hall, for initiation.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Brown left yesterday for Bay City, Saginaw, Detroit and Chicago for a two weeks vacation.

Coming! Get Ready! Our large stock of holiday goods will be on display on Dec. 1. Don't miss it. SORENSON BROS.

Mrs. Emil Hanson entertained a few friends in honor of her daughter Margrethe Elizabeth's first birthday, Tuesday afternoon. The baby was the recipient of many choice gifts.

The mammoth sack of Aristo flour in H. Petersen's window is attracting considerable attention, and guesses on its weight vary from 100 to 950 pounds. A guess with every sack and you will agree that the flour is the best you ever used.—adv.

Orlando F. Barnes has been honored by Governor Ellet Ferris by being asked to give an outline of what legislation is required for Northeastern Michigan. This is a signal compliment to our fellow townsman, and also to Mr. Ferris in recognizing the fitness in Mr. Barnes to bring together such facts and figures that will assist the legislature and likewise benefit this part of the state. Such system practiced in all sections of Michigan, should with the cooperation of the legislature, be the means of giving Michigan a constructive legislation and an economical one. With the facts and requirements of every district of Michigan, carefully compiled by such men as Mr. Barnes, we are going to have a short session of the legislature and consequently a great saving to the State.

We are always glad to extend the messages of our absent friends through these columns and hope to receive a lot of them during the coming year. Following is one from one of our old Grayling citizens: Editor Crawford Avalanche.

Inclosed please find Money Order for $1.50, extending our subscription one year. We are always glad to read the paper, each issue is like a letter from home.

My father, O. J. Bell is just recovering from a two weeks spell of blindness, this attack being caused by a bright electric flash, seen in Seattle, inducing a recurrence of his old eye trouble.

Dad says that if any of our acquaintances should come to Seattle and do not visit us at Meadowdale, we are only 30 miles away there will be trouble. Remember me kindly to all our old friends and with best wishes for the continued success of the Avalanche, I remain, yours truly, H. P. BILL, Meadowdale, Wash.

MONTICELLO RESTORED

MICHIGAN BREVITIES

Grand Rapids.—Because of their belief in the pre-millennial theory of Christ's second coming to earth and the rejection of this view by the Methodist Episcopal church, two local pastors, Rev. H. A. Lyons and Rev. J. W. Lawrence have left that denomination. They are now devoting their energies to other forms of religious work in which they may be free to propagate their own beliefs. Mr. Lyons was appointed at the recent Big Rapids conference to take charge of the Constantine church, in the Niles district. He has refused so far to do so. Now he has been placed on the supernumerary list.

Battle Creek.—John Bell, a line-man in the employ of the Bell Telephone company, was electrocuted here. While upon a pole searching for trouble his heel came in contact with a live wire, 3,500 volts passing through his body. He had just adjusted his safety strap and was swinging his leg over the line when the accident occurred. The heel of his shoe was burned off and the flesh of his foot burned to a crisp. The first shock of the current rendered him lifeless and his body hung for several minutes suspended from the wire, and then fell a distance of 40 feet to the pavement.

Grand Rapids.—The jury in the trial of Samuel Ford, charged with the murder of his wife here October 2, returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree after being out two hours. Ford was a bartender in the Wellington hotel and killed his wife because she refused to get out of bed and prepare his supper when he arrived home at a late hour. Florence Price, his fifteen-year-old daughter, gave damaging testimony against him. He was a former resident of Kalamazoo, where he met the woman he killed. He is 38 years old.

Alma.—Charles Gazette, serving a term in the Detroit house of correction for forgery at Saginaw, but at present detained at the county jail at Ithaca as a witness in the Hubbard burglary case, nearly escaped. In some manner he got out of his cell and with a piece of pipe and a screw driver dug a hole through the wall. Sam Dibble, another prisoner, heard a noise and aroused Sheriff Rowell, who nailed Gazette just as he was ready to crawl through the hole.

Flint.—After having shaved himself preparatory to officiating at a funeral, Rev. George A. Yarnon, pastor of the North Baptist church, picked up a bottle under the impression that it contained peroxide of hydrogen and proceeded to complete his toilet by rubbing some of its contents on his face. It was carbolic acid, and as a result of the painful mistake Mr. Yarnon was obliged to cancel his funeral engagement and place himself under the care of a physician.

Holland.—Grace, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bennett of Douglas, was burned to death and her mother probably fatally burned while attempting to rescue her. Grace secured a handful of matches and trotted to the barn. She set fire to a pile of straw and her clothes were soon ablaze. Mrs. Bennett rushed to the barn and snatched the body from the flames, but the child was dead. The barn was destroyed.

Kalamazoo.—Because Mike Talanda insists on keeping doves in his house with him the health officer has a warrant sworn out for the man's arrest. It is charged that the place is in a filthy condition. Talanda declares that no officer or judge can prevent him from living with his doves if he wants to. Officers say they do not care about that, only insisting that he maintain a sanitary home.

Grand Rapids.—Slipping from a river flood wall in the factory district, Michael Matyba was carried out into surging Grand river, while helpless employees lined the river bank. Charles Dewett, a fellow employee, plunged into the icy waters to attempt a rescue. He was seized with cramps and nearly drowned before he could reach ropes thrown to him.

Monroe.—By long distance telephone from Detroit. Conductors Frank Stone and Charles Calkins and Engineer Albert Shumley and Charles Engleton of the Lake Shore railroad pleaded guilty to the charge of speeding trains within the city limits over the six-mile ordinance mark. Justice Bartholme imposed a fine of $30.45 on each.

Beaumont.—John Biljanen, working at the Beaumont logging camp, four miles north of this city, was instantly killed when a falling tree crushed his head.

Lansing.—The state game and fish department has made complaint against a wealthy farmer of Centerville because he stretched a wire netting across the river there and thus kept the fish from running into the lake. As he owns the land on each side of the stream, he contended he had a right to do as he pleased. He also contended the netting was not a fence to keep his cows confined. The state contends he had no right to obstruct the stream, although it is not navigable.

Menominee.—The cornerstone of the new $30,000 Masonic temple at Menominee was laid in the presence of Masons from many surrounding towns. The ceremonies were conducted by Most Worshipful Grand Master James H. Thompson. Lansing. The new temple will be completed in the spring.

Cadillac.—Over 800 people greeted Gov. Clegg, W. N. Ferris at a public gathering in the opera house, where he gave an address on education.

Usual Kind of Office Seekers: "Well, boy's every little thing now that election is over," asked the recently arrived washing machine agent. "But as they are every place else, I reckon," a bit pessimistically replied the landlord of the Turfdown tavern. "The banker, the storekeepers, the lumber yard man, the doctor, the stock buyer, the blacksmith and all the rest of the business men who have always appeared to be capable of managing their various sized affairs successfully, are going on calmly and carefully attending to 'em, while all the trifling, one-galled, incompetents that have never had any affairs of their own to attend to and wouldn't be capable of conducting 'em properly if they had any, are out hotfoot and hobnobbing to get and manage the postoffice for the rest of us!"

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, soothes a bottle.

GIVE me a house on the mountain top and beneath the forest trees." So said Thomas Jefferson, patriot and statesman, who wrote the Declaration of Independence of the United States; long before he had come into the possession of the estate that is set high on the hills near the town of Charlottesville, Va. And he made his wish come true, for when the estate crowned by the hill known as Monticello, "the little mountain," came to him by inheritance, Jefferson brought into being a mansion that was a century ahead of its time in conveniences and ingenious contrivances and from the designs of which the great architects of today fashion the country homes of wealthy Americans. Monticello is indeed a permanent and magnificent monument to the creative genius of the great statesman.

This historic spot has been restored by its present owner, Congressman Jefferson M. Levy of New York, in whose family it has now been for more than eighty years. It is now in as nearly the same condition it was in Jefferson's day. This is the result of years of search for its original furnishings, and a visit to this great mansion is replete with memories of him who fashioned it and brought to its decoration the works of the greatest artisans of France.

Timely interest attaches to Monticello because of the active efforts of Mrs. Martin W. Littleton and others to prevail upon congress to buy the estate, while Mr. Levy is determined to retain it, both because of the loving care bestowed upon the property by his family and the fact that the public enjoys admission to it as fully and freely as though it were owned by the nation.

Down at Shadwell, which lies in the valley of the Rivanna river, two miles from the foot of the little mountain, where Jefferson lived when a boy, still relate the story of the boy's ambition to some day build a beautiful home on the top of the mountain that overshadowed the lowland wherein was his parental home, and how finally he came into possession of Monticello and realized one of his boyish dreams.

The great dome of the mountain did not offer sufficient room for the mansion he had conceived, and ten years of labor with hand, head, heart, and hands elapsed before the crest of the hill had been leveled. Seven years more it took to crown this man-made plateau with the magnificent mansion to which presidents, princes and the people have made common pilgrimage to pay homage to the memory of the man whose wonderful mind and tireless energy found time from the affairs of state to evolve one of the most remarkable specimens of colonial architecture in existence.

Monticello lies about two miles south and five miles west of the busy little town of Charlottesville, and it is up a very steep hill of the way.

Through a typical Virginia town you soon strike into a road bordered by houses on either side, and you learn from this the first lesson of what the present owner has done to preserve the sanctity of the Jefferson home and estate. From place to place the road is bordered by trees on both sides of the road, as he puts it, "the building of any shades on the approach to Monticello."

Soon you drop to the level of a rippling creek that skirts the base of Monticello to reach the Rivanna river, and then begins the climb—winding, turning, twisting around the face of the hill under overhanging trees growing so closely together that the sky is visible only in patches.

For three miles this road, which was surveyed and laid out by Jefferson, rises steeply toward Monticello until a sharp turn brings the visitor to the wrought-iron entrance gates that hang between massive brick pillars at the gatekeeper's lodge.

When the visitor has passed into the inclosed grounds the gatekeeper follows up the road a few yards where, to the right, hangs a big brass bell that Jefferson placed there to announce the arrival of guests. Neither by day nor by night has any one ever passed through those gates whose presence has not been announced to those in the big house above by the ringing of this bell, a quaint custom that has survived a century and a half.

A turn of road brings into view the old burial grounds of the Jefferson family where lie the mortal remains of Thomas Jefferson, his wife, mother, sisters and other members of the Jefferson family.

LODGE and GATEWAY

THOMAS JEFFERSON

The salon is, indeed, a room of wonders. Modelled after the state apartment of Louis XIV, it differs from that only in color scheme, for Jefferson chose red for the basic tone in preference to the original green.

Much has been written of the simplicity of Jefferson. To many Monticello signifies only a fine example of Colonial America roominess and comfort. In fact, Jefferson furnished his mansion not with crude manufactures of the Colonies, but with the finest of the continent of Europe. And, as in the decorating and furnishing of the building, he was equally esthetic in his care for the creature comfort of his guests.

Most of the things that were in Jefferson's study have been lost track of, but Mr. Levy still has a few, and on one corner of the floor there remain thousands of ink stains made by Jefferson's slipping off the supercilious ink from his quill.

Of the original articles there remain a flat writing table, made by Jefferson, upon which it is said he made the first draft of the Declaration of Independence.

When Jefferson died his relatives and heirs decided they could not afford the great expense of keeping open the house as it then stood. Much of the furniture and furnishings were distributed by will, gift or purchase. Mrs. Martha Jefferson Randolph, daughter of the statesman and executrix of his will, decided to continue her home at Edge Hill, the Randolph estate, and was anxious to dispose of Monticello. The place was sold to James T. Barclay, a missionary, who held it but a short time and then offered it for sale.

Commodore Uriah Phillips Levy, then a lieutenant in the navy, drove from New York city to Monticello to inspect the property and concluded a deal by which he acquired from Barclay the Jefferson mansion and 218 acres of the original estate. It was run down from lack of attention and there was little or no original inside furnishings left. Sentimental reasons prompted the commodore to go back—the things that had belonged to the man who built the wonderful house, and for years he sought to regain the articles that had been scattered about the country.

Then came the war of the states, and the commodore, continuing his allegiance to the Union, was declared an "alien enemy" by the Confederacy. The estate was confiscated and the contents advertised for sale at public auction. Again the mansion was partly stripped of its furnishings, and many pieces of furniture were sold at the confiscation sale to families residing in the neighborhood. Some of the articles were returned after the war.

After the war, however, when legal adjustment of the estate of Commodore Levy was had and Jefferson M. Levy inherited the property, Mr. Levy continued the labors of the commodore in restoring the home as Jefferson had planned and left it.

A majority of the articles were recovered, but those pieces that had been taken from the country were beyond reach and few of them were traced. With this as his nucleus, however, Jefferson M. Levy made thorough search of family records and documents, as well as getting information from living friends and relatives who had known the home when Jefferson lived, and from that list he has since attempted to get in his many trips abroad exact duplicates of the works of art, furniture and ornaments originally brought from France by Jefferson. In this Mr. Levy has succeeded with considerable accuracy, fitting up Monticello so exactly as it was originally that Thomas Jefferson might step into the home in spirit and find it familiar with objects intimate with his earthly residence.

In this corner is the coffee urn Jefferson used during his administration at the White House and in Paris when he was ambassador to France. Stepping between double glass doors, that have an ingenious mechanism for opening that would be a credit to modern housebuilding craft, the visitor enters the grand salon, an octagonal room with six French windows that reach from floor to ceiling. Here the impression is felt at once of delicate but luxurious refinement. Priceless treasures of art, relics of Jefferson and his family, are stored in this high-ceilinged room.

son and Randolph families. In loving tribute, too, the remains of many of the artisans Jefferson brought from Europe to help build his mansion are interred in this plot.

Leaving the grave to the majestic solitude of the forest which surrounds it, the visitor follows the winding road still upward through a magnificent park of oaks, maples and pines until an abrupt turn in the path brings him to the main entrance to the Monticello mansion. To the right, on a lower terrace is a quaint old mansard-roofed house, built by Jefferson before the mansion was completed, and it was the loom house, where the cotton, linen and woolen cloths for the Jefferson household were woven and spun.

Turning to the left, the first view of Monticello shows the "President's walk," a causeway of imposing simplicity in which several sets of marble steps break the slight incline to the plateau above. On one of these steps stand two massive marble lions that guard the immediate approach to the house.

Passing up the "President's walk," flanked by neatly trimmed bay trees, the visitor is brought to the main grounds, the plateau that took ten years to level on the mountain top.

A spacious veranda with cased floor leads to the reception hall, a cool, statelily room where formal tranquility is evident in the unusual height of the ceiling, an air of spaciousness and general atmosphere of refinement. The hall is so large and the door of such generous size that a coach and four might be driven through. Just at the entrance, deeply cut into the floor, there is the print of a horse's hoof that was made when the British General Tadeusz rode through the magnificent hall and out through the salon on his fruitless search for Jefferson.

To fully describe the curios and relics that are unfolded to the gaze of the visitor would fill a volume. There are so many and each has its story of historic association, all deeply interesting and in all forming a collection that would attract a condensed museum.

Standing in the entrance one faces the gallery which half encircles the hall—a gallery so gracefully proportioned that Stanford White, the noted architect, declared the beauty of that gallery may never be reproduced, especially the railing. For every portion of it was made by hand, whose art is nearly lost in the modern machine era.

In one corner of this hall is Jefferson's old music stand. Made of walnut, it is almost black with age and there is pasted upon the music shelf a bit of paper upon which Jefferson signed his name.

Next to this rack is a column and capital, the original casts of the model designed by Jefferson from which the pillars of the Capitol were fashioned.

In this corner is the coffee urn Jefferson used during his administration at the White House and in Paris when he was ambassador to France. Stepping between double glass doors, that have an ingenious mechanism for opening that would be a credit to modern housebuilding craft, the visitor enters the grand salon, an octagonal room with six French windows that reach from floor to ceiling. FOUND SAFETY ON THE SEA

About the Only Way Governor Wilson Could Escape From Importuning Politicians.

When Gov. Woodrow Wilson wanted to sidestep the Democratic politicians long enough to write his speech accepting the presidential nomination, he accepted the offer of his old friend, Cleveland Dodge and went to sea upon the latter's yacht. No reporter could get at him; no emissary from Tammany could win near enough to ask a question, and his good nature gradually recovered from the weeks of continual worry. When he landed he first wanted to play golf and then to talk politics.

"One of the first men I ever played golf with was Cleveland Dodge," said Mr. Wilson. "We told each other stories of those early days upon the yacht."

the other night. Neither Mr. Dodge nor myself had any more than a theoretical knowledge of the game and our first performances were unique.

"The trouble is," said Dodge, "that we haven't the right sort of clubs. I'll import some."

"So he sent to Scotland and got an invoice on the finest golf clubs that money could buy. There was an instrument for every possible golfing contingency. When they reached the custom house the officials did not know how to classify them. They knew it most as little about golf as Dodge and myself, and there had been no provision made in the law for an import duty on golf clubs. Finally they levied on them as agricultural implements.

"That," said Dodge, "is a deliberate insult."

"The next day he went on the links with his new clubs. When he returned that night he had changed his mind.

"Those customs officers knew more about the game I play than I did," said he. —Cincinnati Times-Star.

NOT AFRAID OF THIS MOUSE

Nobody thinks of jumping on a chair at the sight of this little mouse. In fact, one can sit in perfect calmness while he gambols on one's lap. For the mouse is really embroidered on the silk stocking. The embroidery is done on the thread silk stocking with mouse-colored silk and the effect is very natural and rather startling at first glimpse.

IN VELVETEEN AND CORDUROY

Combination That Deserves the Popularity Which It Has Been Unhesitatingly Accorded.

Not every one can afford frocks of silk velvet, so velveteen was manufactured as a substitute. It is lovely, and gives practically the same effect as silk velvet when made up. Velveteen and corduroy are used to fashion many smart frocks for street wear.

Plain colors are more frequently used for the velveteen models. They are effectively trimmed with fur, metallic laces, Persian or tapestry embroidery.

Velveteen does not adapt itself so successfully to draping as do the softer velvets, so the skirts are usually plain or with pleated insets.

The bodices are jumper effects, with guimpes of lace or chiffon.

Corduroys in the soft-finished qualities are extensively used.

Frocks and coat suits are developed of this material and seem to find a ready sale.

The two-tone corduroys in brown and tan, blue and black and white are especially favored.

In plain colors, dark blue, brown, black and burgundy are the shades more frequently used.

BLOUSE

This is a smart little blouse to be worn with a costume skirt. It is in soft chiffon taffetas, with embroidery on the shoulders, center front straps and cuffs. Two deep folds are made from the shoulders to waist each side.

Materials required: 1 1/2 yards 42 inches wide.

Evening Dresses. The Grecian draperies and oriental colorings strongly dominate the very exclusive evening dresses, says the Dry Goods Economist.

The latter denotes the ribbed weaves as applied to the moires. The changeable and chameleon effects are shown in the moires quite as often as the plain. The taffeta moire has a beautiful but not too sharply defined watery effect which makes it very desirable. This fabric has almost ousted the changeable taffeta.

Fur in Neckwear. Among the distinctly new ideas in neckwear are the novelties in which thick bands of fur are utilized on the collar portion and, in some instances, on the jacket, is the statement made in a recent issue of the Dry Goods Economist.

Flowers for Pet Dogs. The flower notion has got around to the dogs; for the newest of dog collars is made of a circle of silk ropes, and tints of pinkish yellow take precedence over other colors for them.

MOST PROFITABLE SHEEP FOR AVERAGE MAN TO RAISE IS DUAL PURPOSE ANIMAL

Wool Should Not Be Too Coarse or Excessively Fine, but Should Possess Something of Medium Quality—Superior of Mutton and Wool Most Desirable.

(By L. C. REYNOLDS.)

The best time to study the wool-producing quality of one's flock is when the animals are sheared. As wool is being removed from the sheep time should be taken to remove a few fleeces of the flock and note its quality. In every flock there is wide variation in the quality of the wool from different individuals, despite the fact that they were shorn by the same man and given practically the same care and feed. The average wool producing sheep of the double-deck type should shear at least twelve pounds of wool of good length and density. The wool should not be excessively fine nor, on the other hand, too coarse, but should possess something of medium quality. I have a number of individuals in my flock that annually shear from twelve to thirteen pounds of wool of the quality that always demands the highest market price. These ewes are on the order of medium-breed, although they have been bred for a number of years for both wool and mutton production.

I am firmly of the opinion that the most profitable sheep for the average farmer to raise in the future is the animal that will produce a high quality of both wool and mutton. In view of the fact that many of our flocks at the present time have been bred along mutton lines exclusively, I believe flock owners can well afford to give more attention to the wool-producing side of their flocks.

For the past few years wool has been commanding a very high and uniform price. The mutton market is well established. To insure the greatest profit from the growing of sheep, either on the farm or range, a superior grade of both wool and mutton must be marketed.

There has been a decided improvement in the sheep producing industry in the past few years along the line of dual purpose breeding.

There is plenty of room for considerable more along the line of combining ing both the wool and mutton qualities.

An impression prevails in the north of England, says John Wrightson in London Live Stock Journal, that sheep never drink, and in this faith I was brought up. Water was always considered to be an important accessory in cattle pastures, but its absence was never looked upon as an objection to sheep runs. There is a breed known as "crag" sheep in Lancashire, which range over the extensive upland of the mountain limestone, that are said to require no water, but this does not strike a Northernman as very remarkable as it fits in with his preconceived notions.

Mr. Primrose McConnell supports this view when he writes that "in his boyhood he had herded sheep and cows together in hot summer weather, and been struck by the cows constantly, and he never went near it, and was never seen to drink at all, although they had access to a running stream close at hand. He adds that a Northern sheep would ridicule the idea of a sheep ever drinking unless it was in bad health. This opinion I can endorse with slight modification, as my view in the north of England was that sheep were practically independent of water.

That this is also true to a certain extent in the south is shown by the practice of many good shepherds, who do not allow their ewes water during the period of gestation. There are circumstances in which this rule is not adhered to, but they constitute exceptions which may be said to prove the rule.

To speak generally, it is a bad sign when a ewe drinks frequently, and indicates unsoundness in some form. The truth seems to be that as long as herbage is succulent, or is moistened with dew, or from rain from time to time, sheep do not require water.

When ewes are fed on hay they should have water; and when they receive cake and hay together, and are not allowed roots, it is evident that the moisture of the body must be kept on.

On the other hand, if they have access to roots they do not require water, and this is one of the best reasons for growing roots on high and dry situations.

Again, the need of ewes which have to support lambs at foot are different to either dry sheep or pregnant ewes. They are called upon to supply a larger quantity of water in their milk, and they must be supplied either directly or through succulent food in order to do so.

ATTENTION NEEDED FOR WINTER PIGS

To Raise Two Litters Annually One Must Not Allow Overstocking.

(By G. W. BROWN.)

There is a decided difference in caring for the pigs of autumn farrowing and those of the spring litters. On the average farm the latter have the advantage over the former of coming in previous to the advent of the winter grasses, and have a more generous supply of milk and other laxative food-stuffs to keep them growing and in perfect order.

It has been my practice for a number of years to raise two litters of pigs a year. To do this successfully I find that one must not allow overstocking, but rather should sell off a portion of the pigs soon after weaning time, keeping only so many as he knows he can accommodate with good quarters and generous feeding. One must not slight pigs during cold weather either in housing or feeding.

Besides dry nesting quarters the pigs should have a good-sized lot in which they may get plenty of exercise, and should not be crowded into close, filthy quarters, exposed to vermin and disease.

Our winter pigs are very profitably fed upon whole corn in the fodder, as they delight in getting their feed from this material. I find that they eat very much of this fodder, which forms a fine diet. The cobs and the coarse stalks are raked up and burned for fuel, affording the pigs a generous supply of charcoal.

I aim to keep a cow for every litter of winter pigs, and with the milk and milkstuffs I can grow a bunch of pigs equal to the spring litters.

Floors for Hog Houses. Our experience is that wooden floors in the hog houses will produce rheumatism in the animals just as quickly as cement floors if former are allowed to remain damp and the bedding holds moisture, says a writer in an exchange.

If the cement floors are kept clean and well littered with dry straw or other material frequently, rheumatism will not result.

Better have a hole two feet wide at the top of the pen and a crack two inches wide at the bottom. It is the cold air blowing under the doors and around the pen that causes the greatest discomfort.

Profitable Hens. As a rule it is not profitable to keep hens after they are two years old unless they are of very valuable stock. Now is a good time to mark those for disposal whose age begins to affect them as egg producers.

Chickens to Kill. When disposing of some of the old stock pick out the poor layers. They are "just as good" for roasting purposes, and you cannot afford to part with the money makers.

PROPER FEEDS AND CARE FOR THE CALF

Young Animal Must Have Exercise and Freedom of Yard and Farm.

(By J. C. FRY.)

Feeding and raising the calf on skim-milk is not always an easy proposition, but I have had very good success. The calf stays with the mother until the milk is good to use, then it is given whole milk for three weeks; then it is gradually changed to skim-milk. The calf will soon learn to eat alfalfa hay, by putting a little corn chop in the bucket when the calf is through drinking it will soon learn to eat it. Corn will supply the fat that is taken out of the milk. The calf must have exercise and is allowed the freedom of yard and farm. We have the best success with the fall and winter calves. Hay is better for the calf than grass.

Roots are Fine for Production of Milk. Make Valuable Addition to Rations During the Cold Winter Months.

No matter what some people tell you, turnips and other roots make fine milk-producing feed. Turnips will not affect the flavor of milk if fed at the right time.

If turnips are fed in large quantities, and two or three hours before milking, they are likely to give the milk an unpleasant taste, but if fed directly after milking no flavor what ever will be noticed.

A peck of turnips to each animal per day is sufficient in most cases. A good plan is to feed directly after hay in the early morning, and once a day is often enough.

Roots make a very valuable addition to the winter rations because they add to the variety of the feed and no animal on the farm appreciates variety more than the dairy cow.

Cleanliness and Ventilation. Clean pens, stalls, bedding, etc., and plenty of ventilation are important and without these things hogs are in such weak condition they are likely to take anything.

Handling Lambs. There is a vast difference in handling lambs intended for breeding and for the market. The first should be matured slowly in order to produce good bone and stability, but the latter should be forced to put on fat as quickly as possible, as weight is the only thing that counts.

Horses for Cuba. Cuban police officers recently bought a large number of fine horses in Missouri for the use of the mounted police of Cuba.

RUSSIA AND AUSTRIA PREPARE FOR WAR

INTEREST ABROAD SHIFTS TO APPARENT LIKELIHOOD OF CONFLICT OF EUROPEAN POWERS.

ARMIES ARE ORDERED MOBILIZED AT ONCE.

The Two Great Rivals Are Strengthening Their Border Forces as Statements of Both Nations Talk Peace.

Interest in the eastern war situation shifted from the belligerents, whose delegates are preparing to meet with an apparent sincere desire to work over the terms for a truce, to the great neighboring powers, Austria and Russia.

The titanic rivals are strengthening their border forces at an hour when the statesmen of all the powers are spreading broadcast assurances that their only policy is to subordinate rivalries and interests to the common welfare of Europe in the cause of peace.

No threatening factor in the situation is known which has not existed since the beginning of the war, unless it is the near approach of the Serbian army to the Adriatic, and the steps towards mobilization may mean nothing more than mutual distrust.

When the crisis over Bosnia and Herzegovina arose, both Russia and Austria came nearer to a war footing than they seem to be now, yet the war cloud drifted away.

Reports of the Russian mobilization, published in the Vienna Reichspost, the organ of the help-to-the throne, specifying that all the military districts on the frontier, Vilna, Warsaw, Kiev and Odessa, as well as Moscow, are to adopt a war footing.

Mail Franks Cause P. O. Deficit. Political campaign material transmitted free of postage through the mails accounted, according to postal department records, for the difference between a postal surplus, and a postal deficit for the last fiscal year, ending June 30. An account of franked mail forwarded for congress, the executive departments and other government establishments shows that postage at the ordinary rate on this matter would have netted the government nearly $200,000. About $3,500,000 of this would have been paid on political documents.

The postal service handled during the year 110,350,000 pieces of franked mail, weighing 61,370,000 pounds. This was 2.8 per cent of the total weight of all domestic mail carried.

Boiler Explosion Kills Two. The boiler of a wood mill at Albert, Wis., exploded, blowing up killing Mel Henry, 40 years old, and Albert Nash, city electrician, and seriously injuring John Wagoner, 30 years old, and Waldo Emerson, 25 years old. The force of the explosion threw the two men, Nash and Henry, who were working in the mill, more than 200 feet. Weir was fully 300 feet from the mill and was struck by a piece of pipe, and has suffered internal injuries. The boiler was scattered for hundreds of feet, one piece going through the residence of Mr. Nash, who resides opposite the mill.

Sensations at Dynamite Trial. Imprisonment of Herbert S. Hocking, formerly of Detroit, one of the chief defendants, in default of an increased bond which was required by the court, "because he had deceived everyone," the denouncing by District Attorney Miller of a woman writer in the court room as an "anarchist" and a repudiation by attorneys for the defense of some of the acts of the defendants were among sensational incidents at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial in Minneapolis.

Cecilia Farley Free. Miss Cecilia Farley, the pretty young state house stenographer, who for two weeks has been on trial in Columbus, O., for first degree murder for the shooting of Alvin E. Zollinger, an advertising solicitor, in a city park last May, was acquitted after the jury had been out for three and a half hours.

Mistaking a shadow for an iron beam. Grover Nelson, a structural iron worker told nine stories in Chicago, alighting in a sand pile. His only injury was a broken little finger on his left hand.

The Papagos Indians. who made a government irrigation survey party in Arizona suspend work a few days ago, are good Indians, after all, according to Commissioner of Indian Affairs Abbott. They thought a trust was invading their property and have ceased opposition now.

Applicants for a night's lodging. in Cleveland, must hereafter be able to walk a "literal chalk line" a white streak across an 18-foot room before there is any shelter for them at the Wayfarers' lodge of the Associated Charities.

Jackson Gorgy. an aged resident of Allouan, was seriously burned when a gasoline stove exploded. He lived alone in a portion of the old Allouan house, one of the oldest buildings in the city. The building was badly damaged and a garage was ruined.

Returns show that in Osceola county the names of Herbert Baker, but moonie candidate for auditor general, and Julius B. Kibby, candidate for attorney general, were reversed. This is the third county in which the same mistake was made.

WEDDING TRIPS IN THE AIR

Aeroplane honeymoons preferable in some ways to those of ordinary sort.

There is much to be said in favor of aeroplane weddings, but we shall say only a little of it on a day like this, remarks the Newark News.

Let us indicate a few salient features of this new social institution.

The aeroplane wedding solves the problem of the getaway. When the happy couple depart in an airship their loving friends cannot scare the horses into running away and breaking the bride's neck.

Nor is it possible for them to throw high enough to blacken the bridegroom's eyes with old shoes. The newlywedded pair are, in fact, in a position to bombard the wedding guests if they so desire.

A five-pound bomb dropped on a wedding guest from a height of 250 feet ought to bring him a tremendous amount of good luck, according to the traditions of wedding festivity.

An aeroplane honeymoon ought to be fascinating, fragrant, sailing along all day without having to stand the hold and sway of a patent leather drummer in the seat across the aisle. Fancy being too far up in the clouds to hear the ribald whistle of the young loafers at the railway station.

But airship honeymoons are as sure to come to an end as the other kind. In a careens moment the bridegroom will say:

you do very nicely at the levers, my dear, but your figure isn't as nothing like mother used to make.

A new form of wedding announcement will have to be prepared for the society reporters, in part as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Winger left immediately after the ceremony for an extended aviation tour in France. If they return they will reside at 21 Laurel road.

Aeroplane marriages are highly dangerous, perhaps, but all kinds are for that matter.

To Restore Chartreuse Monastery.

Tourists in all parts of the world will be interested to learn that the famous Grande Chartreuse monastery, which has been sadly neglected for recent years, is to be repaired and restored by the French authorities. Every year it is visited by 60,000 tourists, and if a small entrance fee were charged the monastery could be kept in good condition. The Grande Chartreuse was founded by St. Bruno in 1084, and in 1132 it was completely destroyed by an avalanche, but was reconstructed soon after. Between the fourteenth and seventeenth centuries it was destroyed by fire eight times, and rebuilt on the same site.

The last fire took place in 1678, when the famous monastery was reconstructed as it remains today, practically no change having been made during the last 230 years. It is a venerable monument of French religious architecture, situated in a picturesque site midst the Dauphine Alps.

Polite for the Pastor's Benefit.

Little Mary manners so that on several occasions she had dined on the kitchen cabinet when there was company in the house. But the dinner prepared for the new minister was entirely too tempting to be passed over lightly, so she resorted to all kinds of promises for the privilege of coming to the table.

True to her word, Mary was on her very best behavior, but she did not want a second piece of cake and the plate was over by the minister, entirely out of her reach. After giving the matter considerable thought she folded her hands meekly and exclaimed:

"Mr. Blair, please pass the cake for Jesus' sake!"—Kansas City Star.

Truth About Old Age.

George F. Baer, the famous Philadelphia railroad man, said on his seventieth birthday:

"I agree with Professor Metchnikoff about the wisdom of the old. Professor Oiler made it fashionable to do gray hairs, but my experience has been that the old not only possess wisdom, but they seek it also."

With a smile, Mr. Baer added:

"The only people who think they are too old to learn are those who really are too young."

She Admitted It.

Little Ella's father was an eminent author, and one day while he was at luncheon the little girl occupied a chair in his study. Shortly a caller was ushered in, and with a pleasant smile inquired:

"I suppose you assist your father in entertaining callers?"

"Yes, sir," replied Ella, gravely; "please be seated."—Harper's Bazar.

WHAT TO EAT.

Let us see what we can do with these inexpensive dishes to make an attractive meal. We are paying now for the cheapest cuts of meat what we paid a few years ago for the best, and it behooves us to be economical in buying any of the high-priced meats.

Savory Stew.—Places of tough and gristly meat, which may be made tender and tasty by long, slow cooking. The stews of casseroles have made a great difference in our meat hills where it is commonly in use.

Cut a round steak into cubes and roll each cube in seasoned flour. Put into a frying pan a little fat and fry a minced onion in it until a light yellow. Lay in the meat, fry for five minutes, cover with cold water and simmer on the back of the range for two hours. Season with salt and pepper, add a half teaspoonful of Worcester's sauce and a tablespoonful of catsup. Serve hot with boiled rice or mashed potato.

Bread and Cheese.—This bread and cheese will be followed by kisses if the recipe is carefully followed. Grease a pudding dish and put into it a layer of slices of stale bread. On each slice place a thin slice of American cheese. Beat one egg very lightly, stir it into a pint of milk, and pour the milk over the bread and cheese. Bake in the oven until browned lightly, and serve with a dash of cayenne. Serve hot. This is a nice dish for supper.

Coffee Tapioca Pudding is a simple dessert. Pour over a cup of softened tapioca a pint of left-over coffee. Cook until clear and serve hot with sugar and cream.

Fleeting Shade.

"By Jove, I am glad to see you looking so gay and well!" said Mr. Olds to Mrs. Brown. "You were all black the last time I saw you." "Yes," demurely replied Mrs. Brown, who had just taken a second husband; "but it wasn't a fast black."—Judge.

SAN JAK

The Greatest Cure and Preventive for Bright's Disease.

No one ever cured kidney trouble with a pill, powder, tablet or mineral water. The reason is there is nothing in them by which you can force the drug to the vital point and neutralize the poison in the tissue and reduce the inflammation or granulation of the kidneys. (These are statistics by the most eminent men in the faculty.)

Symptoms of kidney trouble, swelling under the eyes, graying, white or wax color of the skin denotes granular diseases of the kidneys. The cure is SAN JAK. The reason is clear. SAN JAK neutralizes poison in the tissue of the vital organs of the body, clearing away inflammation and catches in all parts of the digestive tract and vital organs. SAN JAK is the only preparation allowing a normal expansion of the kidneys at all times, by which action the kidneys are enabled to absorb alkaline substances, which are the decomposed products of the bowels, and eliminate them. Otherwise, in renal weakness, this condition is the cause of ill health and Bright's with rheumatism.

SAN JAK will not harm a well person and for the weak ones is a faithful means perfect health and strength for young and old.

Man should die of old age, not disease.

SAN JAK will keep your blood as pure as a lily. We sell SAN JAK and will guarantee satisfaction or return the price of one bottle, $1.00.
